DRAW CONCLUSIONS ABOUT CHARACTERS

When you draw conclusions about a character in a literary work, you form opinions about his or her personality. You should base your conclusions on the character’s words, thoughts, and actions and on descriptions of the character made by the author or other characters.

Directions: In the chart, record information about the characters. Not all of the characters will have an example in the speech column. An example has been done for you.

Character	Speech	Actions	Descriptions
Candide			A most sweet disposition
